The Note by the [Bank]

One morning, we were students at a school in a valley. After class, we went into the yard. There we found a single piece of wire on the ground. Beside it was a page with strange symbols. I wrote the symbols on my paper, but no one could read them.

Then Tom made a statement. "I suppose this is from the old bank by the river," he said. We all went there. The road was straight, and the wind was cold.

At the bank, we found a small box under a rock. In it was a note: "If you're here, do not come alone. Help will come if you stick the wire into the ground."

Ben shouted, "This is strange!" but I did it. A light came up. It did not touch my skin, but it made us jump. Then our teacher came from behind the tree and laughed. "You did well," she said. "This was a test. When life is hard, students must not leave someone alone. They must think, make a clear statement, and serve their team."

Tom smiled at me. "Next time," he said, "tell yourself, 'I can do this.'"
